CRILE FILES ANSWER IN ELECTION CONTEST

Denies that "Abbott" Ballots were Not All Counted and Sets Up Claim that Over 100 Ballots Were Illegally Counted in Various Precincts

After denying that any ballots were cast for Jay Abbott, that were not counted, Jacob C. Crile, in his answer in the election contest matter, filed in common pleas court Saturday, sets up the claim that over 100 ballots, cast at the recent election were illegally counted for the former, in various precincts.

The answer was filed by Attorneys F. E. Pomeroy, Milo Ely and T. H. Wheeler, who represent Crile. The question of whether or not ballots, marked with a cross under the Republican emblem and before one Democratic candidate should also have been counted for Abbott and Reiss, the two Republican candidates forms the principal argument in the defense, the claim being set up that they could legally be counted for only the one candidate marked. The answer shows that Crile's attorneys have secured a mass of evidence in the way of how ballots were counted in a dozen precincts and an interesting fight is promised when the contest is taken up by the court.

Election Certified

The first matter taken up in the answer is the fact that following the election and official count of ballots, the board of deputy state supervisors of elections, found that Crile had received a total of 3,421 votes and Abbott 3,419; that the board on November 23, 1912, issued and delivered to Crile their certificate of election, certifying that he had been elected to the board of county commissioners.

General Denial

The answer sets up a general denial to the allegations contained in Abbott's petition, to the effect that no less than 15 Republican ballots cast in Precinct B of the Fourth ward, that should have been counted for Abbott, were not counted for him. Also that in the same precinct, five Democratic ballots that should have been counted for Abbott, were not counted.

It is then denied that in Precinct B of the Second ward, one Socialist ballot, marked for Abbott was not counted and that other ballots cast in 2 A and White Eyes precincts, were not counted.

In Other Precincts

It is then alleged that in various other precincts, ballots counted for Abbott to which he was not entitled, as follows: Clark tp. no less than 15; Jefferson tp. 15; White Eyes tp. 4; Keene tp. 15; Bethlehem 5; Bedford 5; Pike tp. 8; Washington tp. 20; Tiverton tp. 24.

BOARDER MENTIONED IN SUIT FOR DIVORCE

Claiming that his wife has refused to accompany him when he moved from a farm in Muskingum county to another in Pike township, this county, but insisted upon remaining and living with a boarder, William L. Patterson brought suit for divorce against Ida M. Patterson, in probate court Saturday.

The plaintiff states that he was married to the defendant on April 29, 1891 and that they have one son, Alva R. Patterson, aged 20. On October 20, 1911, he alleges, the family moved to the Col. G. W. Crawford farm in Jackson tp., Muskingum county, which they occupied for a year. During that time, one W. S. Mitchell lived at the home as a boarder and the husband charges him and the defendant with improper conduct. He claims that the pair attended the state fair and Coshocton county fairs together last fall and that when he moved, his wife told him that she would not go with him but that she cared more for Mitchell.

Patterson asks for a divorce and an order, barring the defendant from any interest in his property. He is represented by Attorney J. W. Horner of Newark.

WORK IS STARTED ON NEW PENNSY CUTOFF

Not only has the survey for the new coal railroad from Morgan Run to Birds Run, via Plainfield, been completed but a mile of side-track has already been completed at Birds Run and the construction of another mile, which is right on the proposed route of the new road is at present being built. Frank Forney, the well known horseman of Plainfield vicinity, has two farms which the proposed road will cross and he states that he has every reason to believe that it will be built in the early spring.

Denies He Sold Booze to Youth

John Fiecoats of Blue Row was arrested Saturday morning by Constable Edward Curran and arraigned before Squire E. G. Abbott upon the charge of furnishing intoxicants to a minor, Sherman Touvel of the same vicinity.

Fiecoats when arraigned, pleaded not guilty and Touvel, who was present at the same time, stated that he had been given no liquor by the accused. Fiecoats hearing was set by Squire Abbott for next Friday morning at nine o'clock.

Vet's Widow Asks Pension

Although William A. Randles, Civil war veteran of Warsaw, never lived to receive $30 a month from Uncle Sam, a pension granted him shortly before his death, under the new law, his widow will receive $12 monthly.

Mr. Randles died Dec. 20. Mrs. Randles made application for a pension before Squire M. W. Wimmer Saturday afternoon.

BIG POULTRY SHOW OPENS UP MONDAY

LIST OF ENTRIES BIGGER THAN EVER BEFORE.

Monday morning will see the beginning of the biggest and best poultry show ever held in this city. The exhibition will be held at the city hall and many more birds are entered than last year. The show will continue until Friday evening at 9:30 o'clock and prizes amounting to more than $400 will be awarded by the Coshocton County Poultry Association.

A large attendance is desired by the members of the association. It is only once in a long while that one has the opportunity to see such a large collection of fine birds.

Expect No Profits

The members of the association have worked hard to promote the show and make it a success and really deserve a great deal of credit as birds from all parts of the state are entered and the city receives not a little amount of advertising through the show. It is not the wish of the association to make any money out of the affair and in case a certain sum would be cleared the amount would be carried over until next year and given away as premiums.

Falkner to Judge Birds

Saturday evening the coops were arranged at the hall and Monday morning will see the greater part of the birds on exhibition.

Tuesday afternoon the awarding of prizes will be started by Judge Thomas S. Falkner, of Tiffin, who is one of the best known authorities on poultry in the state.

Practically every man in Coshocton who is the least inclined toward fancy poultry has entries in the show.

New Charter for City will be Discussed

The local Socialists will hold a convention in their quarters over Smith's drug store today to nominate 15 candidates to frame a new city charter. The convention will convene at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The meeting is an open one and all interested are welcome.

Two Presidents were Guests in Old Tavern, Now Keene Residence

J. W. Lawrence recently purchased from Hilary Beall a residence property in Keene village which is one of the most historic structures in Coshocton county.

The house was built over one hundred years ago and in the early days it was used as a tavern. Many notable and now historical personages are said to have been guests there.

According to the older residents of the Keene vicinity, in the days of 1835 and later the building was used as a tavern. President William Henry Harrison and Abraham

No Wedding Bells Resists Arrest in Fierce Manner

Strange Story Of Specter From Vicinity Of Dresden

Feigning that she was bewitched and that a ghost demanded that she marry a certain young man, Miss Viola Gosser, 15-year-old adopted daughter of Mrs. Mary Gosser of Dresden has almost driven the aged woman insane during the past two years by her midnight pranks, it is claimed.

The story as told is much like a fairy tale. About two years ago a linen and lace peddler visited the Gosser home in the "Dutch Hills" near Wills Creek. The Gosser home was occupied by the aged Mrs. Gosser and her adopted daughter, then but 13 years of age. The peddler took a fancy to the girl and told her that he wanted her to marry his son. He asked the girl if she would correspond with the son and gave her his address. A correspondence was at once started and shortly after, the girl becoming anxious to marry the man she had never seen, despite the foster mother's objections, began to be visited by a ghost.

Influenced to Sell Farm Mrs. Gosser is said to have become so wrought up about the ghost that she was slowly influenced by the daughter to sell her little farm and move to Dresden in the hopes of getting away from the haunted home. The daughter argued she could secure employment in the Dresden woolen mill and they could live comfortably.

Ghost Reappears They had not been in Dresden long when the ghost again put in an appearance. One night a young man called at the widow's cottage to see the girl. His name, it is said, is Jesse Foraker. He called again and it soon became known that he lived in Dresden and that he was the son of the peddler and the same person who had been writing to the girl while she was living in the "Dutch Hills."

Late at night the ghost would visit the girl's room, according to her story, and write upon papers left upon the bureau and stand.

Family Row Winds Up in One Arrest

Because John Taylor's wife and step-daughter went to the dance at Forbes hall Saturday night a family row ensued at the home on Chestnut street when they returned and as a result Taylor was locked up in the city prison by the police.

Mrs. Taylor called the police commanding them to hurry. Thinking something terrible was happening from the woman's description, the police secured an automobile and hurried to the home. A family quarrel was apparent and Taylor was brought to the city lockup. Mrs. Taylor was asked to appear against him this morning.

Two Presidents were Guests in Old Tavern, Now Keene Residence

Lincoln both visited the tavern while other men of lesser note have been known to spend a night there.

The well, which was dug more than one hundred years ago, is located near the house and the water from it which quenched the thirst of history makers was no more pure than that which is drawn at the present time.

At the present time the house is one of the most modern in that section of the county as every convenience known to the modern village or rural home has been installed.

Sheriff M'Donald Lands Henry Elson Behind Bars After Strenuous Battle Saturday Night - Two Charges Against Prisoner

Fiercely resisting arrest, Henry Elson, day policeman at the Clow plant, was landed behind the bars of the county jail by Sheriff A. C. McDonald and shortly afterwards Albert Murray and James S. Dayton of South Second street preferred charges against Elson in Squire E. G. Abbott's court Saturday night. In the mixup the sheriff received several bruises on the head when kicked by Elson as he lay on his back and a lacerated thumb, bitten by the prisoner.

Murray was struck in the face by Elson, according to the affidavit filed by the former and Dayton charged Elson with being drunk and disorderly.

Woman In Case

The trouble is said to have started when Murray objected to Elson's attention to his (Murray's) sister. Elson is said to have struck Murray on the nose knocking him to the sidewalk. Murray is small of stature and crippled while Elson is a big, strong fellow. Shortly after the alleged assault upon Murray the latter notified the police station.

Sheriff Gets Call

Through some mistake Auditor Frank Mowrey's office in the court house was called instead of one of the call boxes for the police. Sheriff McDonald was in the auditor's office at the time and said he would take care of the call. He went to South Second street where the fight had taken place and found Elson badly under the influence of drink, it is claimed.

Plays "Possum"

When the sheriff grabbed hold of Elson the latter at first went peaceably along but finally threw himself on the ground. The sheriff thinking him weak in the knees because of drink, stooped down to help him up. When he did so, Elson is said to have kicked the sheriff a vicious blow on the head. A short fight ensued and Elson was gotten to his feet.

In Brother's Cab

John Elson, brother of Henry, driving a hack, came along about this time and the prisoner was loaded into the conveyance. No

MAY COMPEL CLARK TO SERVE SENTENCE

It seems as if Samuel Clark of Tyndall will have to serve a suspended sentence pronounced some time ago by Squire E. G. Abbott because of his failure, according to information furnished Humane Officer Vensel, to provide for his family.

When arraigned upon a non-support charge several months ago Clark agreed to pay $15 monthly towards the support of his wife and two minor children. This, the humane officer learns, Clark has failed to do.

Draws No Wages

Clark works for the railroad and it is said has been drawing no wages but allowing it to accumulate until he has more than $100 due him. He is said to have taken this tactic to dodge garnishment proceedings. In the meantime, according to the humane officer, the infirmity directors have been providing for the family.

Crew of Engine Goes to Rescue

An engineer and fireman on the Wheeling left their engine in the "nick" of time Saturday afternoon to save a lady and boy, driving a frisky horse hitched to a buggy from probably serious injury.

Into Stone Wall

The people were driving between South Eighth and South Seventh streets on Orange along the Wheeling tracks when a yard engine came towards them. The

Falls Off "Wagon"

Elson had not been drinking for quite a long time it is said and worked steady as day police at the Clow plant. It is said he fell off the "water wagon" Saturday.

Edward H. Heiser, 10-year-old son of Charles Heiser of South Second street was operated upon at his home Saturday for the removal of tonsils and adenoids. Drs. Cone and McClain performed the operation.

PEACE ENVOYS IN DEADLOCK

Proposals as Submitted by Turks Turned Down.

London, Dec. 29.—The deadlock in the Turko-Balkan peace conference remains unbroken. After a session of 1 hour and 45 minutes in St. James palace, the envoys adjourned until Monday without any progress having been made.

A dark outlook prevailed when the delegates resumed their session, after a four days' recess. Mehdi Pasha of the Ottoman delegation, who presided at the meeting, submitted Turkey's maximum proposals to offset the maximum demands of the allies. The margin of difference between the two notes was so great as to cause much doubt whether the deadlock would be broken soon.

The allies are standing firm upon their contention that Turkey shall not be allowed to retain more than a foothold on Europe, whereas the Ottoman plenipotentiaries ridiculed this proposition, saying that "Turkey should not be deprived of territory she was valiantly defending when the armistice put an end to hostilities."

The Turkish representatives said they would be compelled to communicate with Constantinople before resuming negotiations. Representatives of the allies seem to feel assured that the powers will support them in their demands. But while this view lends hope to the Balkan envoys, they do not minimize the stiffness of the struggle ahead. One of the Balkan envoys is quoted as saying that "it might be three weeks before a compromise is reached."

So far as can be learned, the Ottoman envoys have not reached an agreement upon any point at issue. Interest was divided here between the peace conference and the present attitude of the Austrian government towards Serbia.

Austria is still maintaining a big armed force on the Serbian frontier, and has given assurances to the other powers that she will continue to keep an army there until guarantees are given by Serbia that the Adriatic port of Durazzo will be relinquished.

THIRTY-EIGHT ARE CONVICTED

Dynamite Conspiracy Jury Deliberates 40 Hours.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 29.—After being out 40 hours and 25 minutes, the jury in the dynamite conspiracy trial returned its verdict, finding 38 of the 40 labor leaders guilty.

Daniel Buckley of Davenport, Ia., and Herman Seiffert of Milwaukee, were found not guilty. The verdict found the 38 defendants guilty on 52 counts of conspiracy and unlawfully transporting dynamite. The penalty is a fine or imprisonment or both.

The defendants sat with faces grim and set. A light of happiness was on Buckley's and Seiffert's faces. Wachmeister of Detroit cried like a baby at the verdict.

Judge Anderson dismissed the jury after thanking them profusely for "their good and faithful work." Court adjourned until 10 a. m. Monday.

Following were the defendants in the dynamite trial: George Anderson, Cleveland; John H. Barry, St. Louis; Ernest G. W. Baser, Cincinnati; William Bernhard, Cincinnati; Charles Baum, Minneapolis; W. Bert Brown, Kansas City; Daniel Buckley, Davenport, Ia.; John T. Butler, Buffalo; E. A. Clancy, San Francisco; Patrick A. Cooney, New Orleans; James Cooney, Chicago; James Coughlin, Chicago; Michael J. Cunnane, Philadelphia; Patrick F. Farrell, New York; Michael J. Higgins, Springfield, Mass.; Herbert S. Hocking, Detroit; D. E. Houlahan, Chicago; Hiram R. Kilne, Muncie, Ind.; H. W. Legleiter, Pittsburgh; W. J. McCain, Omaha; Fred W. Mooney, Duluth; Paul Morris, St. Louis; J. E. Munsey, Salt Lake City; Frank J. Murphy, Detroit; Frank J. Palmer, Omaha; M. L. Pennell, Springfield, Ill.; E. E. Phillips, Syracuse, N. Y.; James E. Ray, Peoria, Ill.; W. E. Reddin, Milwaukee; Fred J. Shireman, Indianapolis; William E. Shupe, Cincinnati; Peter J. Smith, Cleveland; Edward Smythe, Peoria; Olav Tveitmo, San Francisco; C. W. Wachmeister, Detroit; Frank C. Webb, New York; Michael J. Young, Boston; Frank M. Ryan, Indianapolis; Herman G. Seiffert, Milwaukee.

These 40 union men were tried for conspiracy to transport explosives illegally in connection with McNamara's dynamite plots. The 40 sat in a gloomy courtroom every court day from Oct. 1 to Dec. 26, while their wives and relatives alternately smiled and wept among the spectators and their children played hide and seek through the marble pillared corridors.

This was the longest trial of its kind ever conducted and the largest number of defendants ever tried in one case. Few juries ever faced the task and responsibility the 12 jurors faced in this case.

Five hundred and forty-nine witnesses and more than 1,000 exhibits were introduced by both sides. The trial cost $300,000. It was estimated. New facts were given in the trial just ended here. Herbert S. Hocking, former secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Iron Workers, was branded by three government witnesses and numerous exhibits as the betrayer of his fellow unionists.

Hocking's motive was said to have been a desire to displace J. J. McNamara as secretary-treasurer of the union. When McNamara went to jail, a confessed dynamite, Hocking was given the office. When the government's guns were trained on Hocking during the present trial he was forced to resign.

An almost tragic scene took place in the courtroom in the few minutes following the end of the trial. As United States Marshal Edward Schmidt ordered the prisoners, one by one, to step before the court, the wives of a score of the men in the rear of the room leaned pitifully over the railings, calling for their husbands.

Mrs. Frank J. Higgins of Boston leaned far over the railing and collapsed. She had been crying hysterically. Another disposition was shown by Mrs. John H. Barry of St. Louis. With a smile she threw her arms about her husband, begging him to have courage. "Be of good cheer, John," she said. "You can not expect a severe punishment."

As soon as his name was called, Frank K. Painter of Omaha pulled a stickpin out of his necktie and his purse out of his pocket and handed them to one of his attorneys.

James Cooney, one of the Chicago prisoners, sat with outward calm reading a newspaper while the verdicts were being read, and threw down the paper only when his name was called to step before the court.

FINANCIERS WANT WILSON'S MANAGER

New York, Dec. 29.—William F. McCombs, chairman of the Democratic national committee, who journeyed with President-elect Wilson to Staunton, Va., to participate in the off-home festivities for the president-elect, left New York city greatly puzzled as to his future.

For nearly two years he has devoted most of his time to the Wilson propaganda, which resulted in the nomination of New Jersey's governor at Baltimore. He has almost entirely neglected his law practice and has given of his personal means to the Wilson campaign. Until, according to his friends, he is now reputed to be in straightened circumstances financially.

Since election day Mr. McCombs has had many and important offers of retainers from influential financiers and railroad men to represent them at Washington and New York during the next four years. One retainer was for $50,000 a year from a prominent northeastern financier and railroad man, according to reliable information.

With this glittering financial future confronted with the proposition that he accept the portfolio of secretary of the navy in President Wilson's cabinet. The salary of the post is $12,000 a year.

URGED LEARNED MEN TO BUY HIS STOCKS

New York, Dec. 29.—The voluminous correspondence carried on with prospective investors by Julian Hawthorne, the literary member of the quartet of mining stock promoters, including in addition Josiah Quincy, Dr. William Morton and Albert Freeman, all of whom the government is prosecuting for illegal use of the mails, is drawn upon for the bulk of the evidence submitted. A great many of these letters were addressed to officers of the United States army, university professors and prominent graduates of well known institutions.

On Oct. 2, 1908, he wrote in part as follows to Professor Royal Meeker of the department of history, politics and economics at Princeton university:

"I really do not know just how seriously you have considered this matter, but you must realize after all that I am not a promoter, and I would not be classed as one. I have put all my money into this enterprise because I believe in it."

"If you should decide to join us, you can rest assured that your interest will be looked after, and in my opinion your only regret will be that you are not the owner of at least 10,000 shares."

To Colonel C. H. Heyl, Washington, D. C., he wrote a month later, in a letter announcing the acquisition of 160 acres more by the Temagami company, containing properties which the company had been working for some time without notice to stockholders. He added:

"I am frank enough to say that I have gone into this matter expecting to get 100 per cent a year, and I will not object if I get 100 per cent. I went into it because I saw great opportunities before me and I believe that anyone else who is considering the matter has similar expectations. People would be foolish to put their money into a mining project—and I am very sure they wouldn't do it—with any 10 or 15 per cent in sight."

SOW AN ACT

A long time ago a wise man said: "The law of the harvest is to reap more than you sow. Sow an act and you reap a habit; sow a habit and you reap a character; sow a character and you reap destiny."

The child forms the habit of inattention in school. He pays no heed to what the teacher says and invariably asks to be told again what the rest are already doing. That child grows into a youth who gains the reputation of being "dopey" and a "dreamer."

He learns to play cards for amusement and then for money. The card habit, innocent enough in itself, becomes a fixed habit and the love of gambling establishes the most hopeless traits of character a human being can form.

It is seemingly a far cry from a single act to unalterable destiny. Yet the successive steps are there in uncounted thousands of human lives. An unthoughted act; a definite habit; an established character.

It is a natural law for the fruits of the vineyard and the grains of the field to yield ten and twenty fold increase. It is just as much a law of nature for us to reap from our heedless sowing of acts the whirlwinds of unalterable destiny.

GOOD DEEDS LIVE ON

There is a common expression, used half in jest and half in earnest and used so much as to have almost the force of a maxim. "The good die young." Reduced to the abstract figures of an almanac's table it would doubtless be found that the good, like the bad and the indifferent die at their appointed time.

But in another sense, the good never die. It was Dickens who once declared in one of his immortal "feature stories" that "There is nothing, no nothing, innocent or good that dies and is forgotten. An infant—a prattling child dying in its cradle—will live again in better thoughts of those who loved it, and play its part through them, in the redeeming actions of the world though its body be burnt to ashes and drowned in the deepest sea."

A kind word, a sympathetic deed endure forever. They are as indestructible as matter. The evil men do may live after them, but so do their good deeds. A friendly hand on a boy's shoulder with the right word of encouragement may start—a chain of influences which have exercised a beneficial effect on uncounted thousands of human beings.

The beauty of a good deed is that the doer never knows how far reaching it is. It goes on and on in ever widening circles. Like the quality of mercy, as described by Portia, "It blesteth him that gives and him that receives." So true is this that it would be better to revise the saying that "the good die young" and with better grace exclaim, "The good never die."

NEED OF INTERURBANS

Communities that have interurban railways appreciate their social and commercial advantages to a far greater extent than those which do not have them. B. B. Sticher, general manager of the Texas Traction company, calls attention in a recent discussion of the subject, to some facts that might otherwise be overlooked in this day of progress.

Mr. Sticher has estimated the increase in land values that follows the construction of an interurban line through an undeveloped part of the community. In Texas the electric railway builders count on influencing two square miles of territory for each mile mile of track constructed. This area contains a total of 1280 acres. It has been found that where land is valued at $50 an acre before the line is built those farms abutting on the right-of-way double in value, the more distant farms being increased proportionately. The Texas railroad man says that on this basis there is, for each mile of track, an increase of $32,000 in farm values.

Nor is the rural dweller the only one to benefit. The small town resident finds his business comfortably enhanced in value, although in a smaller ratio than the increase in farm quotations. Traction building is yet in its infancy in Texas, but the excellent results are to be seen wherever the interurban service has been attempted. Indiana people have had the interurbans so long that, like the steam roads, their part in developing the state is often forgotten. Interurbans have done a great deal for the state.

Taking the place of local steam service, affording trains at shorter intervals and offering more frequent stops, the electric service has contributed largely toward the growth of small towns throughout the state. Indiana has a great number of thriving communities of 300 to 500 population that might long ago have been absorbed by larger places had it not been for the connecting link maintained by hour or half-hour service on the interurbans.

Of course, what is true of Texas and Indiana is equally true of Ohio. The development of interurban railways in the last fifteen years is one of the industrial marvels of the age. Farmers of this county can have no adequate conception of what interurban freight service means to rural communities.

The Tribune has always insisted that the first material need of this county is interurban railways. Until it gets them it is bound to lag behind those better favored communities in other sections of the state. It is a movement on which town and county can well afford to unite because it means prosperity for both.

Editor The Tribune:

"HEAVING THE LOG"

Editor The Tribune:

In your issue of 24th inst., a "piece" copied from the St. Louis Globe Democrat, on "nautical knots and miles" is not up to date on "heaving the log." When the pilot has left an Atlantic liner for his motor, the command is given to "heave the log," where it remains as a trailer until on the other side of the ocean, the pilot's motor is seen approaching, when the log is wound up. The log of today is a very ingenious piece of machinery, invented by a master mind, too deep for my describing. It consists of a brass cylinder about three feet long, and about four inches in diameter, with both ends closed, excepting at the one end where the fine elastic wire cable passed into the machinery. This cable I judge, is about one hundred and forty-five feet long. The ship end is attached to a registering machine fastened to the stern gunwale—the sailors pronounce it "gunnel"—which is over four feet above the main deck, or about thirty-six feet above water surface. The log machine registering right along. The fine cable revolves fast or slow according to the ships speed. Unless stormy weather prevails, a number of inquisitives are generally interested watching the machine register. "The ocean is a ship round than the land. A ship distant fifteen miles, only the top of a mast can be seen with the binoculars, or marine glasses. Standing on the rear platform of a rear car while passing through Kansas, or Texas, with a fairly good field glass, looking back over twenty miles, the two rails look country is less than that necessary to obtain the bare necessities of life. No time for pleasure without which there is no normal life, no time to train mind and heart. Their labor is drudgery day after day, year after year, almost from the cradle to the grave. Under such conditions man can rise but little above the animal creation. No wonder that consumption of alcoholic liquors is on the increase. We marvel not that prostitution, insanity, murder and the like are as great today as ever before.

With all the medical and sanitary knowledge of the centuries, disease is rampant in the human race. With but few exceptions, there is such a knowledge of the cause, prevention and cure of diseases, that now such disease as consumption, typhoid etc. should practically wiped out.

But why is it not? Because of most of the sickness is here—namely poverty. We spend our time, money and energy in treating effects and not cause. This is a season when charity becomes prominent. We hold all kinds of entertainments and sell stamps in the name of charity and we direct this money toward the effect and not the cause.

Far be it from me to belittle the work of charity. The world has never given its best thought to destroy poverty. Christ's mission on earth—the fitting of this world for normal, healthy living has never become the vital program of the people.

If poverty be the cause of so much suffering, misery, sickness and crime, why should we have it? not because the world is not producing enough. We are living in the golden age of prosperity. The dividends from our big corporations alone would destroy most of the poverty in our land.

Then what is the cause of this poverty? These dividends, this profit from the boys and girls and men and women is the cause of poverty—the private ownership of the means of wealth.

The cure—the collective ownership of all the means of wealth says the socialist. No other body of people have ever offered any cure. The rest labor under the assumption that poverty is here to stay.

The taunt of "Unchristian" is hurled at us from every side. But the Christmas spirit is the spirit of socialism. Our purpose is to put into operation the teachings of the Christ—brotherhood, love, peace, justice, etc.

A MEMORABLE FIGHT

Editor The Tribune:

On December 28, 1862 the army of the Cumberland under command of Major General W. S. Rosecrans broke camp at Nashville, Tenn., and started for Murfreesboro, thirty miles distant. We had gone but a short distance until fighting began.

We kept on fighting two days when we arrived near Murfreesboro. We skirmished all day. The third day and Wednesday, December 31 General McCook's corps on the right of the army was taken by surprise while eating their breakfasts and were driven back to General Crittenden's corps.

We repulsed them and the fighting became general along the whole line. The fight was terrible all day long with terrible loss on both sides. The twenty-fourth O. V. I. lost heavily, losing over one-third their number in killed and wounded and their colonel, Fred Jones, Lieut. Col. Terry and Major Weller were all killed and all the officers of the regiment were either killed or wounded except two.

Bernard Short of Co. K was killed and Frank Higgins, John Miller, Leroy Johnson, William A. White, James C. Butler, T. J. Boggs, Mitchell Adams and Armistead Kitchen were wounded. On Thursday there was not much fighting. On Friday General Rosecrans massed fifty-two pieces of artillery on the bank of Stone river and massed his whole army in solid formation. We could hear the enemy cheering in our front and knew they were preparing for a desperate charge.

Rosecrans sent a brigade out in front of them, the twenty-fourth O. V. I. being one of the regiments. The battle began and, falling back, we drew them into our trap. Our fifty-two pieces of artillery opened up on them. For an hour there was desperate fighting. The Johnnies then retreated leaving over 1,100 dead and thousands wounded in our front that night.

The loss was heavy on both sides. Coshocton county was represented in that battle by the 24th, 51st and 97th O. V. I. The 51st and 97th lost several good men. Rosecrans' army then went into camp and remained at Murfreesboro until the latter part of June, when they started for Chattanooga.

Several Coshocton county boys and relatives who lost loved ones will remember it, as well as hundreds of poor men who are today suffering from disease and wounds incurred in the Civil war.

Respectfully yours,

John Miller.

Late of Co. K., 24th O. V. I.

MINISTERIAL VIVISECTION AND THE GROWTH OF CHURCHES

The minister is not the only factor in the working efficiency of a church, but he is a highly important one. It is a matter of common knowledge that a business which has no one immediately in charge of it is not apt to prosper. There are few kinds of business that will run themselves. The church is an enterprise which requires constant care. The minister is the man in whom the responsibility for this care is vested. He is presumably an expert in church administration. The efficiency of the church will depend largely upon the minister's performance.

JOHN HOUSE.

MINISTERIAL VIVISECTION

Editor The Tribune:

Ministerial vivisection is the greatest crime committed by most is a crime not only against the country and village churches. It is a crime against the churches themselves. It consists essentially in dividing up a minister between two or more different charges and compelling him to attempt to do in several different places work which requires his constant attention in each place.

Out of 746 churches in 14 counties only 129 had undivided ministers; 264 had each a half minister; 172 had each a third. 381 had a fourth or a fifth of a minister each. A whole minister has a big enough task to keep a church alive, as the records will show. A piece of a minister has an infinitely more difficult task.

It is hard to separate cause from effect in such questions as this, but the figures are striking. Of those churches with a whole minister each, 55 per cent, are growing; of the half a minister churches, 58 per cent, are growing; of the third of a minister churches, 36 per cent, are growing while all of those churches with less than a third of a minister each, only 24 per cent, are growing. It is not good business to send a part of a man to do a man's work or to send one man to do four men's work.

There is still another angle of this question which shows quite clearly the effect upon church growth of the minister's presence. It is obvious that when a minister for example, has four churches, one of the churches has a resident pastor; the other three have a non-resident minister. A little more than one-third are handicapped by the fact that they have one or more other churches at a distance which they must work in addition to the church near which they live. In spite of the fact, of all of these churches with resident pastors 49 per cent are growing, while of the remaining number of churches which have non-resident ministers only 27 per cent, are growing. The margin of difference here is too great to be accidental. Moreover, this condition holds throughout all parts of the state.

One other point to clinch the argument. If it is true that the lack of a minister present on the ground is a serious obstacle to church growth, it should follow that church with no pastor at all would scarcely be able to maintain itself. In these 14 counties were 68 churches which last summer were without pastors. Of these 68 churches just 3, or something over 4 per cent, were growing. The obvious necessity for the church which desires to insure its efficiency is to provide itself with all of a minister.

Mr. Bradford Surprised
The mail carriers of the Coshockton rural routes enjoyed a pleasant social time last evening at the home of Obadiah Bradford, carrier on route 7. The occasion was the celebration of Mr. Bradford's 56th birthday anniversary.

The guests had been invited and the entire affair arranged as a surprise for Mrs. Bradford—and the surprise was complete. Mr. Bradford was presented with a handsome gift by the other carriers. The evening was thoroughly enjoyed by each and every one of the guests. Mr. and Mrs. George Clark were among the guests and Mr. Clark entertained the others with a number of selections on the harp. Late in the evening a delicious lunch was served. Mr. Bradford's guests were W. C. Davis, H. D. Smith, W. W. Bechtel, Edward Duling, William Slaughtor and Clarence Rodehaver.

THE PEOPLES BANK

Coshocton, Ohio

Will Name Commission Candidates

On Thursday evening, January 2 there will be a most important meeting of the Grace Church Brotherhood. The meeting is open to all interested and topic of discussion for the evening is "The Commission Form of Government." F. E. Pomerene will be the principle speaker, followed by T. L. Montgomery, E. S. Gaumer, C. K. Clemens, R. M. Temple, C. M. Wimmer and others. The meeting will be of special interest to all voters and a general invitation is extended to all who desire to attend.

Miss Williams Will Leave for Rochester, N. Y.

Miss Harriet Williams who for some time past has been associated with the Coshocton Daily Times, has resigned her position as society editor on that paper to accept a position with "The Western New Yorker" published at Warsaw, a suburb of Rochester, N. Y. Miss Williams' resignation will take effect in a fortnight and she will go directly to her new work in Warsaw.

Miss Williams home friends congratulate her upon securing the position which opens to her a new and exceedingly interesting field of work.

Dutter to Leave the Fountain

Fred V. Dutter, who has been connected with the Fountain Dry Goods Company for the past 10 years, tendered his resignation Saturday and will leave in the near future to open a women's ready-to-wear clothing store in another Ohio town.

Mr. Dutter became associated with the Fountain when the business was located in the Bachert building, now occupied by the Buckeye clothing store. Since being associated with this store he has had charge of the women's ready-to-wear department where his ability was unquestioned. Two years ago he was made assistant manager of the store and during the absence of George Caton, general manager, on account of illness, had complete charge and supervision of the store.

His removal from Coshocton will cause widespread regret among the many friends he and Mrs. Dutter have made during their residence here.

Coaster Collides with Tree

Birney Mills, young son of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Mills of Walnut street, was considerably bruised about the left side Saturday morning while coasting down the Walnut street hill.

Young Mills and a number of companions were enjoying the sport when Mills' sled collided with a tree in front of the M. P. parsonage. Fred Lorenz, who happened along, carried him to the fire station across the street and later to his home where an examination showed that he was not seriously injured.

NO WEDDING BELLS

The message was always the same: "You must marry Jesse Foraker."

Only Girl Sees Specter
Other nights the ghost would visit the girl's room and be seen by her. The mother slept in an adjoining room and the ghost would knock upon the partition between the rooms. The ghost was visible to the girl but the minute the mother would tremulously enter, the specter would depart.

One night the aged woman became so excited that she arose late and rushed through the streets. In a short time more than 200 people gathered around her home all looking for the ghost.

Fake Is Disclosed
The aged woman, although almost insane from the visits of the specter, refused to give her consent to the marriage of her daughter because of the daughter's extreme youth.

The mother then went to an intimate friend and asked what she should do. After the friend had investigated he arrived at the plausible conclusion and assured Mrs. Gosser that it was a scheme of the girl's to get her (Mrs. Gosser's) consent to marry the young man.

Wedding After Courtship of Half Century

Brownville, Pa., Dec. 28.—After a courtship of 47 years Miss Kate Lanning, 62 years old, of West Brownville and Samuel Clear, 62, of California, Penn., were married today.

Their reasons for not marrying sooner are not known. The groom is a farmer. An attempt to keep their marriage from their friends failed and the aged, but happy bride and groom were tendered a rousing serenade before leaving the Aubrey residence.

The happy old couple stated they were glad "it was over as they had dreaded their friends' reception for some time."

Social Events by Elks

Coshocton lodge No. 376 B. P. O. Elks is announcing its annual New Year's smoker for Tuesday evening, December 31 at the lodge rooms in the Rodgers building. The committee in charge is composed of W. B. Lynde, D. E. Thaxton, H. B. Hunt and Hugh Rogers.

In addition to the smoker the committee is announcing a series of entertainments to be enjoyed during the remaining winter months. These affairs will be good ones deserving large attendance. On January 15 there will be a dance in Forbes hall, on February 24 at 2 p. m. the annual observance of Ladies Day will take place followed by a smoker in the evening, another dance will be given in Forbes hall on March 13 and there will be a smoker on March 27.

OFFICER 666

When "Officer 666" climbs up on the balcony of Travers Gladwin's handsome Fifth avenue residence to ascertain the reason for a light that shines suddenly from its second story window, he has no inkling of the exciting chase he is about to have in his efforts to clasp the handcuffs on the wrists of an internationally famous dress-suit burglar, whose particular hobby is priceless paintings. Otherwise, this famous sleuth would have phoned headquarters for the shiny wagon with the noisy gong attachment.

How much trouble "Officer 666" gets himself into by not having this thought before he confronts the aforesaid cracksmen in the very act of cutting Gladwin's celebrated collection of old masters from their frames, and how the thief, though apparently trapped, with every avenue of escape cut off and a battalion of policemen searching every nook and cranny of the surrounded houses, escapes, is told in the three acts in which Augustin MacHugh has written this farce, "Officer 666" which Cohan and Harris announce for presentation at the Sixth Street Theatre Monday, December 30.

DEPUTIES' SALARIES ARE FIXED

The question of whether the common pleas court has power to appropriate fee money for clerk hire after the county commissioners refuse to do so, has created considerable agitation about the court house for the past several weeks.

Fix Salaries of Clerks

The law provides that when the fees of a county office are not sufficient to provide for funds necessary for clerk hire, the common pleas court may appropriate from the general fund. This has been necessary in the case of each Coshocton county office this year with the exception of the probate judge. Two weeks ago, when the commissioners fixed the salaries of the various clerks and deputies they allowed Probate Judge Ashman $1,000 for his deputy. In view of the fact that the fees of the office that year amounted to $1,205 and the auditor's and treasurer's office were allowed $1,200 for deputies, Judge Ashman asked the commissioners to reconsider the matter and allow his office $1,200. The petition was denied, whereupon Judge Ashman appealed to common pleas court.

Cites Precedent

When Judge Nicholas took up the matter of allowing the extra funds to the various county offices Prosecutor George Klein called his attention to an opinion given by the common pleas court of Noble county and sustained by the circuit court to the effect that such appeal cannot be made, under the law, to the common pleas court until the commissioners have exhausted all the fee fund of an office or in other words in the case of the local probate judge's office, the decision of the board to allow $1,000 is final. Further developments are expected.

Grand to Be Host at Game Dinner

Honoring his 27th birthday, M. Abood, "Worthy Grand" of the Bong Bong club, will entertain today with a game dinner. The members of the local lodge and several out-of-town brothers will enjoy the feast which will no doubt be one of the most sumptuous ever served in this city.

Original Meaning of "Snob."
"Snob" meant originally in the land of its origin a person of plebeian station, considered from the height of "birth." It was a word used with the downward eye and upward nose of superior station or assigned to the haughty by popular convention. Then Thackeray took it and rebuked with it the social ambitions of the vulgar.

TURN LIMELIGHT ON G. WASHINGTON

New York, Dec. 23.—Daughters of the American Revolution are up in arms over the following comment on George Washington made by Mayor Gaynor:

"The general impression of Washington is largely mythical. We think of him as a good man who told the exact truth always and who never got angry. This is all in the main true, but as a matter of fact, he was of warm blood and prone of passion. He is even known to have sworn like a trooper at times. And his face was pitted; and he had bad teeth and other defects."

Gaynor's comments on Washington are included in a criticism of a book, "Washington and Lincoln," written by a Brooklyn minister. The mayor says further that Washington was not the equal in knowledge of history, economics and government of the men who surrounded him.

Cleveland Pitcher Injured.
Athens, Tenn., Dec. 23.—James Baskette, better known as "Big Jim," a member of the pitching staff of the Cleveland team of the American league, suffered an accident here which may terminate his career as a ball player. While celebrating Christmas with firecrackers and fireworks, Baskette, who is spending the winter at his old home here had a Roman candle explode while he was holding it in his hands. The charge went backward into the right eye of the ball player, and in all probability the sight of the eye will be permanently destroyed.

Donahay Picks Two Aids.
Columbus, O., Dec. 23.—A. B. Beck, inquirer of the state tax commission will be deputy auditor under Auditor of State-elect Vic Donahay, and V. H. Mowles of New Philadelphia will be his chief clerk. The salaries of these places are $3,000 and $2,400 respectively.

Riddle Wife With Bullets.

WILSON SPENDS DAY AT BOYHOOD HOME

Staunton, Va., Dec. 23.—Woodrow Wilson, president-elect of the United States, opened his eyes here in the same home and in practically the same surroundings as 36 years ago, when he was born. He had slept in the parsonage of the First Presbyterian church, of which his father, the Rev. Joseph R. Wilson, was pastor, more than a half century ago.

From far and wide came admirers and childhood friends. The crowds began to surge through the streets early to gain the best vantage points from which to catch a glimpse of the future president and to view the parade, which marked the celebration of his birthday anniversary.

Governor Mann and other officials, both state and local, joined in welcoming Governor Wilson. To this he delivered a speech in response. Then, followed a public reception, and at night a banquet, at which he made a short address.

CARNEGIE TO HELP SMALL CHARITIES

New York, Dec. 23.—Andrew Carnegie intends soon to increase his benevolence to $205,000,000 by donating $25,000,000 for small charities.

Announcement that Mr. Carnegie is planning this latest donation was made by H. H. Topkayan, Persian consul general to New York, who secured the information at first-hand from Mr. Carnegie himself.

Mr. Topkayan had called upon the ironmaster to solicit his aid for the Red Cross fund in Constantinople. During the conversation the steel millionaire informed his visitor that he is planning to begin the new year by giving away $25,000,000 for small charities, which will be divided upon various institutions.

At the same time Mr. Carnegie promised to send a substantial check for the relief of the war sufferers in Constantinople. Mr. Carnegie also agreed to head a committee of prominent men to raise funds for the Balkan war sufferers.

Mr. Carnegie has already given away $180,000,000 in benefactions of various kinds and the promised gift of $25,000,000 will place him at the head of the world's great givers.

Farrell Not Worried.
New York, Dec. 23.—Owner Frank Farrell of the New York Americans was not much disturbed by the report that Frank Chance, who is slated to manage the Highlanders next year, had written to a Chicago friend that he did not think Farrell would hire him because the salary he asked was too high. Chance will manage the Highlanders next year, said a close friend of Farrell's. "The salary question is not going to be an obstacle."

Schooner Burned; Crew Missing.
Newport, R. I., Dec. 23.—The United States revenue cutter Seneca and Arushnet searched the sea in the vicinity of Block Island for survivors of the unknown four-masted schooner which burned. No sign of the crew or of any wreckage was sighted, and it was thought that the blazing ship had gone down and that her crew was drowned by the upsetting of the life boats in the terrific sea that was raging.

The STOLEN SINGER

by MARTNA DELLINGER

COPYRIGHT 1911 THE DOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.
CHAPTER I.—Agatha Redmond, opera singer, starting for an auto drive in New York, finds a stranger seated in her chauffeur's car. She is annoyed, but he remains. Leaving the car, she goes into the park to read the will of an old friend of her mother, who has left her property. There she is accosted by a stranger, who follows her to the auto, climbs in with her and chloroforms her.

CHAPTER I.
Twilight in the Park.
"You may wait, Renaud."
The voice was firm, but the lady herself hesitated as she stepped from the tonneau. There was no answer. Holding the flapping ends of her veil away from her face, she turned and looked fairly at the driver of the machine.

He seemed a businesslike, capable man, though certain minor details of his chauffeur's rig were a bit unusual, and now that he had been obliged, by some discomfort, to remove his goggles, his face appeared pleasant and quite unassuming. His passenger noted these things, remarking: "Oh, it isn't Renaud!"

"No, Mademoiselle; Renaud hadn't showed up at the office when you telephoned, so they put me on in his place."
"Ah, I see." Accent seemed to imply, however, that she was not quite pleased. "The manager sent you. And your name is—?"
"My name—rather odd name—Hand."

The face half hidden behind the veil remained impassive. A moment's hesitation, and then the lady turned away with a short, "You will wait?"
"As mademoiselle wishes. Or shall I perhaps follow slowly along the drive?"
"No, wait here. I shall return—soon."
The young woman walked away, erect, well-poised, lifting skirts skillfully as she paused a moment at the top of the stone steps leading down into the tiny park. The driver of the machine, free from observation, allowed a perplexed look to develop in his countenance. "What the devil is to pay if she doesn't return—soon!"

The avenue lifts a camel's hump toward the sky in the space of fifteen blocks, and on the top, secure as the howdah of a chieftain, stands the noble portico of the old college. To the westward, as every one knows, lie the river and the more pretentious park; on the east an abrupt descent offers space for a small grassy playground for children, who may be seen, during the sunny hours of the day, romping over the slope.

As the gaze of the woman swept over the charming little pleasure, and beyond, over the miles of sign-boards, roofs, chimneys and intersecting streets, the serious look disappeared from her face. Summer haze and distance added a gentle beauty over what she knew to be a clamorous city—New York. Angles were softened, noises subdued, sensational scenes lost in the dimmed perspective. To a chance observer, the prospect would have been deeply suggestive; in the woman it stirred many memories. She put back her veil; her face glowed; a long sigh escaped her lips. Slowly she walked down the steps, along the sloping path to a turn, where she sank down on a bench. A rosy, tired child, rather the worse for mud-pies, and hanging reluctantly at the hand of a nonchalant nurse, brought a bit of the woman's emotion to the surface. She smiled radiantly at the lagging infant.

The face revealed by the uplifted veil was of a type to accompany the youthful but womanly figure and the spirited tread. Beautiful she would be counted, without doubt, by many an observer; those who loved her would call her beautiful without stint. But more appealing than her beauty was the fine spirit—a strong, free spirit, loving honesty and courage— which glowed like a flame behind her beauty. Best of all, perhaps, was a touch of quaintness, a slightly comic twist to her lips, an imperceptible alertness of manner, which revealed to the initiated that she had a sense of humor in excellent running order.

It was evident that the little excursion was of the nature of a pilgrimage. The idle hour, the bit of holiday, became a memorial, as recollection brought back to her the days of childhood spent down yonder, a few squares away, in this very city. They seemed bright in retrospect, like the pleasant paths of a quiet garden, but they had ended abruptly, and had been followed by years of activity and colorful experience in another country. Through it all what anticipations had been lodged in her return to home? Something there would complete the story—the story with its secret ecstasies and aspirations—the story of the ardent springs of youth.

More to be brought with unusual cheer to a young woman. Therefore I hope that this home, modest as it is, may tempt you to an early return from the stage, and lead you to a more private and womanly career. This I make only as a request, not as a condition. I bid you farewell, and give you my blessing.

"Faithfully yours,
"HERCULES THAYER."
Agatha Redmond folded the thin sheets carefully. There was a mist in her gaze as she looked off toward the distant city lights.

"Dear old gentleman! His whole life-story, and my mother's too, par-haps!" Her quickened memory recalled childish impressions of a visit to a large country house and of a solemn old man—and of feeling that in some way she and her mother were in a special relationship to the house. It was called "the old red house," and was full of fascinating things. The ancient man had hidden her go about and play as if it were her home, and then had called her to him and laid open a book, leading her mind to regard its mysteries. Greek! It seemed to her as if she had begun it there and then. Later the mother became the teacher. She was grieved, as it were, within sight of the windy plains of Troy and to the sound of Homeric hymns—and all by reason of this ancient scholar.

There was a vivid picture in her mind, gathered at some later visit, of a soft hillside, a small white church standing under its balm-of-gilead tree, and herself sitting by a stone in the old churchyard, listening to the strains of a hymn which floated out from the high, narrow windows. She remembered how from without she had joined the hymn, singing with all her might; and suddenly the association brought back to her a more recent event and a more beautiful strain of music. Half in reverie, half in conscious pleasure in the exercise of a facile organ, she began to sing:

"Free of my pain, free of my burden of sorrow,
At last I shall see thee—"

The song floated in a zone of silence that lay above the deep-murmuring city. The voice was no more than the half-voice of a flute, sweet, gentle, beguiling. It told, as many songs tell, of little earthly love in the grasp of mighty Fate. Still she sang on, softly, as if loving the entrancing melody.

Suddenly the song ceased, and the reminiscent smile gave place to an expression of surprise, as the singer became conscious of a deeper shadow falling directly in front of her. She glanced up quickly, and found herself looking into the face of a man whose gimlet-like gaze was directed upon herself.

Quickly she rose, she could not turn into the path before the gentleman, but in hand, with a deep bow and clearly enunciated words, arrested her impulse to flight.

"Pardon, Mademoiselle, I am a stranger in the city. I was directed this way to Van Cortlandt Hall, but I find I am in error, intrigued in confusion. Would mademoiselle be so good as to direct me?"

The tones had a foreign accent. There was something, also, in their bland impertinence which put Miss Redmond on her guard. He was a good-sized, blond person, carefully dressed, and at least appeared like a gentleman.

Miss Redmond looked into the smooth, neat countenance, upon which no record either of experience or of thought was engraved, and decided feelingly that he was lying. She judged him capable of picking up acquaintances on the street, but thought that more originality might be expected of him.

Suddenly she wished that she had returned sooner to her car, for though she was of an adventurous nature, her bravery was not of the physical order; and she disliked to have the appearance of unconventionality. After the first minute she was not so much afraid as annoyed. Her voice became frigid, though her dignity was somewhat damaged by the fact that she bungled in giving the desired information.

"I think monsieur will find Van Cortlandt Hall in the College grounds two blocks south—no, north—of the gateway yonder, at the upper end of this walk."

"Ah, mademoiselle is but too kind!" He bowed deeply again hat in hand. "I thank you profoundly and may I say, also, that this wonderful picture—!" here he spread eloquent hands toward the half-queenscent city whose thousand eyes glimmered over the lower distance—"this panorama of accidental life, makes a peculiar appeal to the imagination?"

The springs of emotion, touched potently as they had been by the surging recollections of the last half-hour, were faintly stirred again in Miss Redmond's heart by the stranger's grandiloquent words. Unconsciously her features relaxed, though she did not reply.

"Again I pray mademoiselle to pardon me, but only a moment past I heard the song—the song that might be the sigh of all the daughters of Italy. Ah, Mademoiselle, it is wonderful! But here in this so fresh country, this youthful, boisterous, prosperous country, that song is like—like—like Arabian spices in a kitchen. Is it not so?"

Miss Redmond was moving up the steps toward the entrance, hesitating between the desire to snub her interlocutor and to avoid the appearance of fright. The man, meanwhile, moved easily beside her, courteously distant, discourteously insistent in his prattle. But the motor-car was now not far away.

New Engine for Auto Delivery

One of the first automobile deliveries in Coshocton, The Eureka Laundry Company's machine, has been equipped with a new engine. A loose connecting rod put the old engine, which had seen nine years of service, out of business. The hood of the new engine is painted a fiery red.

TO INSTALL OFFICERS

The Junior O. U. A. M. will hold its annual installation of officers in the lodge headquarters on New Year's night. Following the installation there will be an oyster supper and social hour.

Address by Dr. Weaver

Dr. Weaver of the Mizer Sanatorium addressed the nurses of the City Training school at the City hospital this week upon "Narcotics and Poisons." The course of lectures being given by the different physicians in the city is proving a great thing along with the practical training and it can be honestly said that no new hospital in the state affords any better chance of teaching the many things a trained nurse should know than the local institution.

FARMS

We have two or three farms listed that can be exchanged for city property. Ask about them if interested.

We have for sale a few popular sized farms around 100 acres ranging in price from $2500 to $4500.
